The Great Awakening! - reddit

The Necrons are an ancient race of skeleton-like androids. Millions of years ago, they were flesh-and-blood beings, but then they transferred their minds into android bodies, thereby achieving immortality. However, the transference process was flawed, as all but the most high-ranking Necrons lost their souls and became mindless automatons.

An Ambot is a cybernetic construct used for heavy mining duties across the Imperium of Man. Its central nervous system is that of the xenos creature known as an Ambull that exists on many different worlds across the galaxy. The Ambull was chosen to serve as the controlling intelligence of the construct because of its native adaptation to subterranean environments and its instinct for ...

As we saw in the Necron codex, they aren't bad things, and honestly in some cases I think they might actually make a unit straight-up better. The original batch of scars in the core rules were pretty brutal – losing ObSec or a point of WS/BS is punishing enough that it's worth burning RP to just remove the scar – but the new design ...
