Last semester I choose data mining as elective instead of biomedical instrumentation which was easier, and I suffered a lot, I don't want to suffer like that. I am someone who finds electronics engineering subjects easier than computer science subjects TBH.-> Agile software development.

I need guidance to choose my electives as computer ...

I've always told myself since elementary school that I wasn't good at math so why try in it, which resulted in making low c's in math all of my life & even in the 1st semester of my junior year. Seeing how I over came many challenges my 2nd semester of junior year, made me wish I had math during my 2nd semester.

Want to be an engineer? ... But you're not good at math ...

Although I've heard APSC 160 and MATH 101 are quite workload heavy, I don't want to take either one of these in the summer because I have coding experience before (so I can potentially score high in APSC 160), and I am more confident in math than physics (I scored high in MATH 100). The two disciplines I'm interested in are CPEN and ELEC.
